Tracy never saw herself as being "abused" but the name calling and arguing had taken its toll.

She decided to leave and needed a place to stay while she regrouped and moved forward. She found support with issues such as retraining and budgeting at one of FTP's second stage houses.

When Monica's daughter turned 10, Monica began having nightmares as she remembered the sexual abuse she experienced as a child. An FTP counsellor helped Monica put the past behind her.

For 10 year old Matthew, all the yelling at home and bullying at school was making it harder and harder to concentrate. After the FTP presentation at his school, he found the courage to ask the school counsellor for help.

For 20 years, FTP has supported more than 11,000 families through counselling, residential and violence prevention services.

Yet during a recent survey of Caledon and Dufferin residents, 54% of you said you don't know what programs are available at FTP.

Each month in this column, we'll share with you stories of people who found new beginnings through an FTP program or service.
